Tape Stitching Foot

learn how to turn corners

I begin at the bottom of my quilt (just a preference) in about the middle, leaving a bias tail of about 6 inches (again, just a preference for the final step of sewing my binding together). When you come to a corner stop about 1/2" away - the size of my bias tape.

Raise the needle and pull the foot away from the edge.

Swing the quilt around so it is fairly even with the foot (in the direction you are now sewing).

Ensure the bias tape is still inserted correctly in the foot.

The next step is just manipulation of the corner. The more times you do it, the faster you get. You want to pull the fabric next to each edge; having your corner protrude up. I will place a clamp (or a pin) just to hold the fabric below the needle in place - not actually necessary. Again, after several times of creating your mitered corner you will have this down.

At the corner, fold your fabric up - like a teepee.

Then fold it up as shown in the next photo.

You are now ready to move the foot back into place and continue sewing the binding on.

You are now ready to move the foot back into place and continue sewing the binding on.
